

Using The Meet Entry System

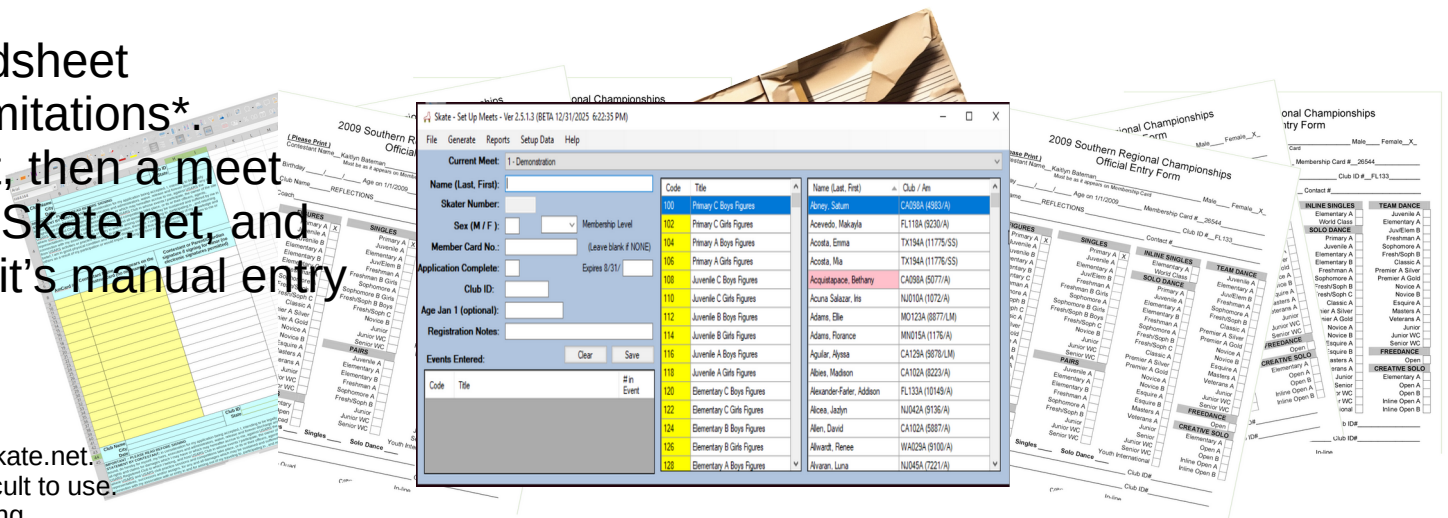

Skate.net is the program used by meet directors to set up an artistic skating competition or meet. Its companion program, TabW, is used to tabulate and record the results of the events held at those tournaments.

Skate.net logically steps through and eases many of the required tasks as we build a contest. One of the most important tasks is accurately collecting and entering the athlete's entries into Skate.net.

Meet directors receive contest entries in the form of spreadsheets, pictures of spreadsheets, emails, scraps of paper, phone calls... From those various inputs the director must accurately decipher and enter the information into the Skate.net program. That re-entering of contestant information is tedious extra work, and open to mistakes.

Although there is a spreadsheet alternative, it has some limitations*. But, if a coach does use it, then a meet director can upload it into Skate.net, and work is saved. Otherwise it's manual entry for each skater.

- * Local event codes are not easily integrated.
- Large and show events are not imported into Skate.net.
- The sheet is large with small text making it difficult to use.
- Requires individual sheet from each club entering.
